Pen Turning & Tube Painting

Phil Duffy gave some helpful suggestions to new pen turners. Measurements have to be precise, pens are turned on a mandrel and collector pens go for ~$1000 and are never used. Drill a 7mm hole (slow speed) for slim line kit pens, attach the brass tube in the hole with Gorilla glue (moisten the wood first). Pens can be made of wood, acrylics or Corian. Sand to ~#1200 grit (less for wood), add a finish and buff.

Shanna Williams likes to paint scenes on the tubes before incasing them in resin. She uses AC Moore's acrylic paints in primary colors only. First paint the tube white. Fan brush makes nice grass and fine paint pens are used to add a signature.

Bruce Robbins started making pens with kits and went into kit-less for a greater challenge. Each pen takes him about a month to complete. For a closed end pen (baseball bat), start drilling with a centering bit then a 7mm. Lube the bit (blade coat) for less burning. With a smaller bit drill another hole ~1/2" deeper. CA glue in the brass tube and with a pen mill trim of the end. Cut the head off a 6inch 1/4" bolt, threaded at the end only and thread it into the hole (last 1/2") chuck it up in a collect on the lathe. Turn the stock into a baseball bat and sand. Logos from water slide decals (Papillio on Amazon) can be made on the computer (ink jet). Add 2-3 coats of lacquer then a CA glue finish and polish.

Pen Turners meet on the odd months only, 2nd Thursday of the month, 7pm Woodcraft.

It's been an interesting 10 years as newsletter editor/secretary but all things must change and the easiest way is to get new blood into the position. When I took over the newsletter was done on Windows Word. I changed it to Windows Publisher 2000. For the next generation I suggest it be handled by one of the new on-line marketing programs available for free to mailing lists under 2000. With this 2 folks can upload photos, edit the newsletter & sent it to the board for review. An account will need to be set-up (mailchimp.com is one such program), email list generated, and templates made. You can track the opening of the newsletter and other stuff. Yes, the start-up will be a pain but afterwards it does get easier. (No, I can't do it as I'm still learning & someone more tech savvy set it up for the carving club) The RW does have a few tech folks that could help with this. The only problem will be converting the published form to pdf files for printing to the snail-mail folks, but it can be done.

Meeting Vibrations

My next suggestion will be to have the demonstrators write up something (~250 words) for the newsletter instead of the editor. Also, I think the President should write up something (~250 words) also. It could be part of the Meeting Vibrations. Coming up with all this inventive writings took me more time than putting the newsletter together. With more article help it might be easier to find a new editor.

Come January I expect to start turning a lot more. Good luck to the new editor/secretary. Betsy Mack Turning Competition will be April 25. AAW grant request time. Send in suggestions to Jim Bumpass. Chuck M & wife were written up in The Flow magazine.

For Sale: Delta Lathe 1440 Iron bed, with a 14" swing, rotating head-stock, stand included (photo attached). I've owned it about 7 years. I paid about $1000 for it, asking $400 now. It's in very good condition. I will deliver it to the Richmond area for an additional $50. Call John at 434-223-7647.

Other news:

Ed Wood & Bonnie got married ~2 months ago.

Just a quick note for the less computer friendly members. If they already have a facebook page, all they have to do is search for Richmond Woodturners and, when they find it (not Hard), hit the request button.

Ray Deyo (owner of Woodcraft) has broken his leg jumping off a truck.
